General Description

Children thrive when they spend their most critical years with dedicated, educated, trained, and well-compensated individuals. The New York Early Childhood Professional Development Institute leads the work to establish and implement an early childhood workforce system to ensure funding, standards and competencies, career development resources, qualifications and credentials, professional development (training and strengths-based coaching), and program quality assurance and improvement for individuals who work with young children throughout New York. Housed at the City University of New York, the Institute is a fast-paced, dynamic public/private partnership that is committed to the early childhood workforce and program quality across New York State.

The Informal Family Child Care Project (IFCC) is a program of the New York Early Childhood Professional Development Institute endeavors to elevate the quality of care for children in home-based child care settings in New York City by assessing and supporting the needs of, advocating for, and increasing the skills and capacity of home-based child care providers through the design and facilitation of an array of comprehensive professional development opportunities. Many parents choose trusted, familiar adults (family members, friends, and local neighbors not required to be licensed) to care for their young children because they understand the families' language, culture, alternating work schedules, or health and special needs. The IFCC project provides professional learning support to home-based child care providers to create an environment that is optimal for the development of children birth – 8 years, including children with disabilities that require tailored assistance.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION

The IFCC project is seeking a full-time professional development training and facilitation specialist to support home-based child care providers. The PD Specialist will be a dynamic, bilingual early childhood trainer with knowledge of general education and special needs pedagogical strategies that can deliver professional development in child development and early learning to family child care providers in New York City. This position will report to the Director of the IFCC project.

Other Duties

- Learning Design and Facilitation of Special Needs and General Education Trainings
- Develop and facilitate general education and special needs professional development training for IFCC home-based providers both in-person or virtually, as determined by the needs of the project.
- Foster learning communities that build adult capacity to sustain best practices within general education and special needs home settings.
- Maintain professional relationships with community partners to share resources with IFCC providers.
- Work collaboratively with the IFCC team to create and implement new professional learning content and strategies.
- Prepare and deliver reports on training sessions as required by the project.
- Share feedback about the professional development sessions with the IFCC team as necessary and relevant.
- With IFCC and PDI leadership and communications team, develop and coordinate a series of two-way communication text messages of targeted content-driven messages that build on existing training content, and general content related to child development, adult-child interactions and resources for home-based providers.
- Attend staff meetings and trainings as required.
- Perform special projects and other duties as assigned
